The Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers on the Decline.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—The Pittsburgh district of Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers is, today, a skeleton of its former self and is in a demoralized condition.

The above remark was made by a prominent member of the order, while in conversation with a party of mill workers.

An investigation was instituted and resulted in securing very interesting data concerning the once powerful organization. Out of the 64 iron and steel mills in the Pittsburgh district, 30 or more are being operated on a non-union basis. Five years ago more than a majority of the mills were working under the Amalgamated association rules and rates.

The first division of the Pittsburgh district contains 35 mills, of which 18 are outside of the Amalgamated association. In the second division of the Pittsburgh district there are 29 mills, 15 of which are not governed by the Amalgamated association.

The loss to the organization of so many mills means a corresponding loss from the per capita tax and dues, in fact the only source of revenue. It is quite likely that several more mills will be added to the nonunion list.

Brown & Company, operating the Wayne iron works, have announced that the scale would not be signed this year, and that work would be resumed on a nonunion basis Monday.

The rod mill scale at the New Castle iron works was signed Friday at a 10 per cent reduction. The mill will resume Monday.
